Here it is, our Evening in Paris. One magical night in the city of lights. A city we built on our own hands and knees We arrived through the doors and into an enchanting garden of ivv we stepped. The music played through the evening, king and queen we picked. The night too good to be true drew to an end as the witching hour approached. What marvelous dreams we reached that night. #### Addison Olters Swim Team

The Addison Otters Swim Team is composed of swimmers from Vergennes and Mt. Abraham. The athletes practice together five days a week, for two hours a day. Practices are made upof a combination of distance swimming, sprint practice, and dryland

The swim season lasts for six months. During these six months swimmers work their hardest to reach their own personal goal times that they set at the beginning of the season. Throughout the winter the team travels to swim meets which are spread out through Vermont and parts of New York. They are held every weekend and usually last for at least four hours. At the end, swimmers who make certain qualifying times attend Junior Olympics, which are held at Remsselear in Troy. New York.

Vermont Teen Leadership Safety Program

On a beautiful September day sixteen members of VTLSP and five adults attended the Low Ropes Course at Basin Harbor Club. We were divided into two groups where we worked on team building and trust activities. The Mohawk Walk on wires strung between trees was the most challenging event. The Whale Watch, the last activity, brought the groups back together. Everyone had to balance on a large four foot by ten foot wooden platform! It was great fun! The group bonded by exchanging ideas and working together toward a common goal.

Hefty Bag

When I way young, before my experiments with a fence at the state of the most wonderful plaything. It was big it was black and it was a Shaft action figure. It was known only find a name that I had seen him. Hefty and I had many great times together playing games, cuddling, or just hanging around on our kitchen counter One particular game that comes to mind was called Astronaut. It was a st game unlike anything that I' e ever done before. I would put Hefty over my head and everything would go black. because of Hefty magical powers, after a while I even began to feel weightlessness. It was like I really was in space, except for the fact that there were no stars.

Like MacGuyver's pocket knife, Hefty gave me countless uses Some included a parachute, a blanket, and a pair of pants. (All of which were all to often needed when no such thing could be found ) Yes, my love for Heft was a powerful thing, but one day Hefty died My mother had said something about not having a trash bag for the garbage, and not knowing what a trash bag was at the time, I simply continued on with a game: a game involving Hefty. Without warning, that maniac that I call my mother grabbed Hefty by the throat, no loss, and proceeded to turn his body inside out Then like some cannibalistic warrior she grabbed him by the foot and stuffed him in to a bin of some sorts. Next, taking his mouth, fit him securely by stretching and folding his lips up and over the outer rim I screamed. My friend, my hero, had been butchered before my eyes. I screamed again and quickly received a stern gaze from my mother for creating such a racket.

Later that day in the park, I came across two men arguing about something called "Bag brand names and recognizing the word that I heard in that violent encounter I told these gentlemen my story and tried to convince them to arrest my mother on charges of murder.

In the ears ahead I see that those men had found in their hearts to dedicate a product to my friend. I never forgot that day, that day when all honor was restored. When the proud name of Hefty was known to all. -Ethan Brash

SPEAKERS PROPHERY

Will ou die to convince Us, as one The truth of the speakers ancient prophecy? You would pity the hatred Had it been shown By a hundred morged together and Particulary worried people Who all believe he is crazy. But still you wouldn't see that this Is another time, another place The speaker is no longer considered God But still you cry it above the crowd Saying it is the truth Believing it is the truth The deep truth of the universe. But even though it is the truth My friend You will never have followers Who believe in it with you. For tomorrow you will be dead My people will stay ignorant And you will be dead And I, l will lock away the truth Burn it, kill it Until no one knows what Truth is - Lyndsay Bushey

Reflections on Nature

It's raining It's autumn, the leaves are brightly colored the air is fresh and it's raining As I trudge through the slippery mud which covers the trail that leads up Buck Mountain i glance up once in a while, whenever I can risk not looking at my feet Being an optimist I try to imagine what the fore I would look like on a clear sunny day I see the sun lighting up the trees ind searching downwards through the branches I feel the crunching of dry twigs and the shuffling of leaves beneath my feet I hear squirrels and birds chattering in the limbs of trees I feel carefree in the light brisk morning.

A cold trickle of water down the back of my neck brings me back to reality, and I lose my balance on a slippery rock I fall, not with a crash, but with a splash and shiver as the water seeps through my jeans In need of rest, and already soaked anyway, I stay where I have landed. Again I look up at the forest around me. Being cold and wet though my imagination is not strong enough to bring me back to the warm and comforting place that I had seen before my fall Instead I am forced to look at the woods as they are I am surprised to find that despite the rain, this place too is beautiful.

My gaze first falls upon the ground in front of me I notice a spider web stretched between two stems of grass The drops of water upon it make it glisten, as if it were a diamond -- a jewel of the forest I move my eyes upward in search of more treasures I see the trunk of a tree a sight that is normal to me but at my proximity to it, I now find that it is covered with tiny patches of moss Grasping its green and velvety surface, I stand up Closing my eyes I turn my head upwards towards the branches, and feel the cool rain on my face When I open my eyes, I see that the water has collected to form tiny waterways on every limb, branch, twig and leaf. The tree is bathed in the rain, and I realize that water is the source for all life -- not only my own.

Recovered from my fall, I again start up the trail This time though I do not disguise my vision of the forest with a picture of a sunny day. I instead bask in the coolness of the rain that has now soaked my clothing, and I feel exhilarated Like the tree whose roots draw rain into itself, I have drawn the rain into myself, bringing with it a feeling of freedom and a clarity only found through a walk such as mine As I leave the woods later that day, I pick up a leaf to bring home. Looking at it will keep me warm and dry inside, no matter what the autumn weather may bring

Teacher of the Year

Theresa Cavoretto attended Trinity College in Burlington, Vermont. There she earned a B.S. in Biology, a B.A. in Secondary Education, and a Masters in Education of Middle Grades; she is currently working on CAS Leadership at Trinity. Ms. Cavoretto was originally interested in cancer research and considered a career in medicine. When she became involved with the Vermont Institute of Natural Science, though, she found that she enjoyed working with students, which prompted her to become a teacher of math and science. She has been teaching here at V.U.H.S. for nine years. Her goals for the future are to complete her CAS degree in Leadership, and to begin the process toward National Certification in Science. She also hopes to begin a Ph.D program in a year or so. In her free time, she enjoys spending time with her family, playing golf, and traveling.

We at first attached to the trusted ones whom we have been since we were five and depended on them for ecurity. Gradually, we drifted off to find compatibility with others and soon became friends with them That many feeling was gone. By the end of the first year we all became united

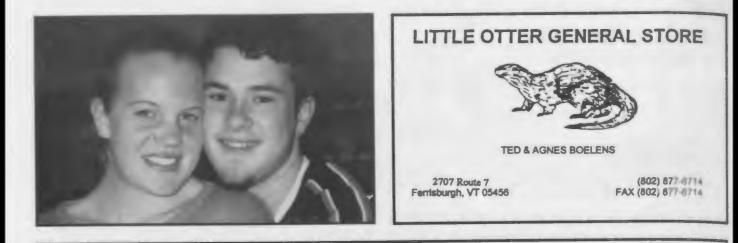

As a whole we excelled academically, athletically and more ally. For that we should be commended. Whether it we performing or competing or just being a friend, we more let each other down. Even though we will encounter installed for our two years, at times we will look forward to the privileges that we earned.

As we take our last step into high school we reminisce our seventh and eighth grade years, a challenge that we urpassed and with many memories that we will arry for as long as we stick together
